54 roundtable discussion by gaston vargas, valentin mashkin and viktor deruga on u.s. foreign policy. yuriy andropov's recent statement was an appropriate response to reagan's unga speech. reagan said that the united states is seeking to reduce the use of force and create conditions for peace. but the actual picture is quite different. Salvadoran rebels want to negotiate a peaceful settlement; however, washington has rejected this proposal. the same thing happens in Nicaragua. what reagan says is quite the opposite to what he does. the united states usually resorts to force to impose its mandate. in his unga speech, mr reagan criticized the nonaligned movement. The reagan administration has toughened its position toward the nonaligned movement. but the real reason underlying mr reagan's criticism is that those countries do not bend to u.s. mandates. the killing of salvadoran and guatemalan civilians falls under the terms of the geneva conventions, which classify the killing of noncombatant civilians as war crimes. the united states also disregarded the inter-american reciprocal assistance treaty during the malvinas war. mr reagan's unga speech was aimed at hiding the true u.s. objectives. yuriy andropov has rightly referred to the united states as an aggressive power seeking to dominate the world.
